Apaches to the Mescalero reservation in that territory.

This protest is something which appeals to the sympathy of every resident of the Rocky mountains. It is a cry coming up from New Mexico for help and deliverance from a great worry. It is a protest of a people who have suffered long and hoped for relief until it seemed almost that hope was in vain. It is an expression of the honest indignation of men, who, after years of struggling to build up the section of the union in which they the section of the union in which they live, see evidence that their efforts are unappreciated by the authorities at Washington, and that indifference to western interest characterizes the policy of the national government.
